Planning on Gardening or Hiking?

The Library may have just the information you need

Submitted by:

Enjoy the sun while you can. If you do that by gardening or hiking, the Library might have something to help you out.

Spring is slowly showing itself with longer days, warmer temperatures and, at least for the last two days, the emergence of the sun. Of course, it is still raining and there is still frost on the roofs, but the signs are there that warmer days are ahead. Even with the wind, it is still a good thing.

So maybe curling up with a book is not the priority at this time. Maybe you are thinking of visiting Sunset Bay and hiking the trails there or maybe it is time to start gardening (judging from the number of landscaped houses I see when I walk around the community, this is what many of the residents living here are doing). Believe it or not, the Library has some materials that might help you out.

100 Best Plants for the Coastal Garden: As the title suggests, this book is a guide to the 100 best plants to grow if you live on the Pacific Northwest coast. It includes descriptions of 100 plants plus reference tables, growing and care techniques and even recommendations for shopping wisely at garden centers. These plants are not necessarily native to the Pacific Northwest; they were selected for having at least one outstanding quality such as a colorful bloom and their ability to thrive in the local climate.

Propagation of Pacific Northwest Native Plants: This is a similar book but as the title suggests (again!) it is specific to native plants. This title is designed for both home gardeners and nursery professionals and gives comprehensive information on how to best grow nearly 140 different native plants. No doubt a few of these selections can be seen around the Killich community in places like the Cultural Garden and gazebo across the street from the Health Center.

120 Hikes on the Oregon Coast: OK, if you want to go on a nature hike, you can simply walk up the road past the Plankhouse or use the trails behind the Community Center that wind around Tarheel Reservoir. Venture out a little further and with less than a ten-minute drive you can visit either Sunset Bay or the South Slough Reserve. In 30 minutes you can reach Bullards State Park or Seven Devils Wayside; both are south of the Killich community and can be accessed by taking Seven Devils Road. Gee, who would have thought a place called Seven Devils Wayside would be accessed by taking a road with the same name? As you can imagine, this guide describes in detail these parks and the hikes available in these areas as well as 100 more located on the Oregon Coast. The book lists these hikes by geographic region and the section covering the southwest Oregon coast has over 30 excursions ranging from easy one-mile hikes to all day treks. You don't have to hike to enjoy these spots. You can have a picnic lunch and enjoy the view.

EnergyTrust of Oregon to offer FREE energy-saving devices to all Kilkich homes, June 8 - 9!

Energy Trust of Oregon representatives will be on Tribal lands June 8th and June 9th to offer and install FREE compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFL's), faucet aerators, and water-efficient showerheads for any resident interested in the FREE energy-saving products. Accompanied by a CIHA staff member, the representatives will visit each home to perform the installations. The existing items that are replaced with the energy-efficient products will remain with the resident (light bulbs and showerheads).

It is estimated that the average home will save over $60 a year in energy costs by using these energy-efficient products.

- Efficient showerheads help you save money without compromising on comfort. Changing out just one showerhead can save over 280 kWh per household annually; using less water means your hot water will last longer.
- ENERGY STAR® qualified compact fluorescent light bulbs, or CFLs, use 75% less energy than standard bulbs; they last up to 10 times longer (or up to seven years, depending on daily use); and can save up to $30 during its lifetime - all while producing natural-looking light.
- High-performance faucet aerators save on water heating costs and use up to 20% less water compared to standard fixtures without reducing water pressure.

Start saving energy today by practicing these energy-saving habits:

1. Unplug battery chargers for power tools, mobile phones, laptops and other devices when not in use.
2. Use a Kill A Watt® energy monitor to see where you can cut your electricity use further - CIHA has a monitor that you may borrow.
3. Turn off lights when not needed.
4. Use a countertop convection, microwave, or smaller electric appliance instead of a full-size stove whenever possible.
5. Turn down the thermostat to 65° - 68° during the day and 58° - 60° at night during cooler months. If you have a heat pump, turn the thermostat down no more than ten degrees at night.
6. Wash and rinse laundry with cold water. To save more energy and water, run full loads.
7. Use the water-saver washing and energy-saver drying options on your dishwasher.
8. Check to make sure refrigerator and freezer gaskets seal tightly.
9. Clean lint filters after drying each load of clothes; this also reduces the risk of a fire.

If you would like more energy-saving information, log on to:

<http://energytrust.org/residential/free-your-home/>

If you are NOT interested in receiving the FREE energy-efficient products, please contact CIHA at 541-888-6501 BEFORE June 8, 2011.
