MEET COQUILLE TRIBAL POLICE OFFICER PARRISH

If you've lived at Kilkich at any time, chances are you've met Officer Matt Parrish. After working as a Reserve for the Coos County Sheriffs office, Coquille tribal member Matt started working for the Coquille Indian Tribe Police Department in 1999.

Officer Parrish with his family

Matt was drawn to work as a police officer since his great uncles and grandfather worked in law enforcement. Matt said he enjoys the diversity of working for the Tribe; he's able to work in the woods, back up other agencies, and enjoys talking to kids at the Learning Center and other residents in the community. During his time in law enforcement, Matt spent four years on the County's Emergency Response Team and has been the tribe's firearms instructor since 1991. Outside of work, Matt's number one priority is his family. Matt (and his beautiful wife as he describes her) Lois have been married for 32 years.

COOS BAY LIBRARY'S COMMUNITY FRIDGE

The Coos Bay Public Library (CBPL) has partnered with South Coast Food Share (SCFS) and the Beet Food Systems Consortium to make healthy produce more accessible to members of the Coos Bay community. SCFS is supporting this project by providing the fridge and The Beet is funding our food and operational costs. CBPL patrons can obtain fresh produce six days a week during the regular hours.

Everyone who enters the Library will be eligible for free produce after being asked a few basic questions that will only be used for statistics. We will not share your personal information. During August, the fridge served more people than ever – over 2,000. Come and visit us at the Coos Bay Public Library for some free produce and please, if possible, help us keep this program sustainable by bringing your own bag. For more information call 541-269-1101.
