KILKICH AREA PLAN

October 2026 Update

The Kilkich Area Plan is entering the home stretch, and the excitement is building as we move closer to completing this important project. What began as a community conversation about the future of the Kilkich area is now taking shape as a clear plan that can help guide future growth and improvements for years to come.

Over the past month, the project team has been focused on bringing together all of the information, ideas, and feedback gathered throughout the planning process. Input from Tribal leadership, staff, community members, and project partners has helped shape recommendations that reflect both the community's priorities and opportunities for the future.

MONTHLY PROGRESS

A key milestone is coming in November, when Technical Memorandums 5 through 7 will be presented to Tribal Council. These memos bring together the main recommendations developed throughout the project and outline a proposed path forward for the Kilkich area. They cover topics such as housing, transportation, infrastructure, community amenities, and future development priorities, while identifying practical steps for implementation.

The Tribal Council presentation will be an important opportunity to review the recommendations and discuss the next phase of the project as the plan moves toward adoption. The project remains on track for final review, approval, and adoption in December. Once adopted, the Kilkich Area Plan will help guide future decisions, investments, and development within the community while supporting the long-term vision for the Kilkich area.

We appreciate everyone who has contributed their time, ideas, and feedback throughout this process. We look forward to sharing the recommendations with Tribal Council next month and continuing to move the plan forward.
